

Contents

Series Foreword by Diane Belcher and Jun Liu ix

Preface xi

Introduction 1

1. Understanding the Role of Context in Teacher Commentary and Student Revision Response 9

Understanding How Institutional and Programmatic Context May Affect Commentary

Providing Commentary within Specific Institutional and Programmatic Constraints

Taking Student and Teacher Factors into Account as They Shape Context and Commentary

An Overview of Context

2. Establishing Effective Communication between Teacher and Student 26

Avoiding Appropriation: Understanding and Responding within the Student's Rhetorical Context

Listening to Teachers: Educating Students about Teacher Commentary

Listening to Students: Educating Teachers about Student Preferences, Needs, and Difficulties

Conclusion

3. Understanding the Nature of Effective Commentary 61

Helping Students Read Their Writing Critically and Communicate Areas on Which They Would Like Feedback

Determining What to Comment On

Commenting on Writing Processes

Shaping Teacher Commentary

Addressing What Students Need to Learn about Writing and about Texts

Putting It All Together: Planning for Response

4. Reflective Teaching and Teacher Research 103

Reflective Teaching

Possibilities for Reflection

The Nature of What Is and Is Not Commented On

    The Nature of Comments: What Shape Do My Comments
    Take?

The Interaction between Commentary and Revision

Other Areas for Research

Sharing Research

Conducting Sound Research

Reporting Research

Conclusion

5. Educating Pre- and In-Service Second Language Composition Teachers 125

Preliminaries: Process, Product, and Genre

Pre-Service Teachers: Learning about Response as a Whole
ClassChoosing Students/Texts for Individual Practice for Pre-
Service Teachers

The Response Assignment

Giving Teachers Feedback on Their Written Responses

In-Service Teachers: Learning about Response while Teaching

Summary

References 148

Subject Index 155

Author Index 161