

Contents

Chapter 1: Is Error Treatment Helpful for L2 Writers?	1
Definitions	1
Error	1
L2/Second Language Writers	3
International Students	4
Late-Arriving Resident Immigrants	5
Early-Arriving or Generation 1.5 Students	5
Perspectives on Error Correction	7
A Brief History	7
Second Language Acquisition and Its Implications for Error Correction	9
Challenges to Error Correction in L2 Writing Classes	10
Arguments for Continued Error Treatment	12
Error Feedback Helps Students Revise and Edit Their Texts	12
Error Feedback Leads to Accuracy Gains over Time	12
Students and Teachers Value Error Feedback	13
Written Accuracy Is Important in the Real World	14
Concluding Thoughts	15
Questions for Discussion and Application	15
Further Reading	17
Chapter 1 Notes	17
Chapter 2: Research on Corrective Feedback in L2 Writing	20
Effects of Corrective Feedback on Student Writing	20
Adequacy of Teacher Feedback	20
Student Uptake of Error Feedback	24
Teacher Correction and Timed Student Revision	24
Teacher Correction Followed by Out-of-Class Revision	25

---

The Influence of Error Feedback on Student Revision	26
Effects of Error Feedback on Student Accuracy over Time	27
SLA Studies of Written Corrective Feedback	27
Classroom Studies of the Effects of Corrective Feedback over Time	28
Research on Feedback Approaches	29
Focused and Unfocused Feedback	30
Direct and Indirect Feedback	31
Explicitness of Feedback	34
Effects of Error Feedback across Different Linguistic Categories	35
Global and Local Errors	35
Treatable and Untreatable Errors	36
Beyond Corrective Feedback: Effects of Other Classroom Interventions on Students' Written Accuracy	37
Alternate Forms of Error Feedback	38
Error Correction and Revision	38
In-Class Grammar Instruction	39
Error Charts	40
Student Views of Error Treatment in Writing Classes	42
Possible Directions for Further Research	46
Methodology	47
Questions for Further Research	48
Longitudinal AND Contextualized?	48
Effective versus Ineffective Error Treatment	49
Student Views and Individual Differences	49
Concluding Thoughts	50
Questions for Discussion and Application	52
Further Reading	54
Chapter 2 Notes	55
Chapter 3: Preparing Teachers of L2 Writers to Treat Student Error	57
Understanding the Problem	57
Teachers' Error Treatment Strategies May Not Always Be Effective	57
Teacher Preparation Programs May Not Adequately Address Error Treatment	60

---

Teachers May Have Philosophical Objections to Error Treatment	61
Preparing Teachers for Error Treatment: Five Principles	62
1. Teachers of L2 writers need to study aspects of grammar that are particularly problematic for non-native speakers of English.	62
2. Teachers of L2 writers need practice in recognizing and identifying errors in student writing.	64
3. Teachers of L2 writers need practice in developing lessons and teaching grammar points and editing strategies to their writing students.	65
4. Teachers of L2 writers need to understand the principles of second language acquisition and of composition theory.	67
5. Teachers of L2 writers should become familiar with language structures needed for different task types and academic disciplines.	69
Concluding Thoughts	70
Questions for Discussion and Application	72
Further Reading	73
Appendix 3.1	74
Chapter 3 Notes	76
Chapter 4: Responding to Student Errors: Issues and Strategies	78
Choosing Which Errors to Mark	79
Comprehensive versus Selective Error Correction	79
Errors versus Style	80
Criteria for Selective Error Feedback	81
Consider Errors Common to L2 Writers	82
Recognize That Different Students May Make Distinct Types of Errors	82
Students' English Language Learning Backgrounds	83
The Influence of Specific L1s	85
Differences in L2 Proficiency	86
Decide How to Prioritize Feedback for Individual Students	87
1. Global versus Local Errors	87
2. Frequent Errors	88
3. Structures Discussed in Class	90

Timing of Error Correction	91
Options for Corrective Feedback	93
Option 1: Indirect versus Direct Feedback	93
Option 2: Error Location versus Error Labeling	97
Option 3: Marking Broader versus Narrower	100
Categories of Errors
Option 4: Codes versus Symbols versus Verbal	101
Comments
Option 5: Textual Corrections versus Endnotes	102
Option 6: Alternatives to Written Error Correction	104
Following Up Corrective Feedback	108
Avoiding Burnout	108
Concluding Thoughts	110
Questions for Discussion and Application	112
Further Reading	113
Appendix 4.1	114
Chapter 4 Notes	121
Chapter 5: Beyond Error Correction: Teaching Grammar	122
and Self-Editing Strategies to L2 Student Writers
Helping Students Understand the Importance of Editing	123
Training Students in Self-Editing Strategies	130
Helping Students Become Aware of Their Most	130
Pervasive Error Patterns
Educating Students about Principles of Successful	130
Self-Editing
Teaching Specific Editing Strategies	131
Training Students to Look at Problem Areas	131
Encouraging Students to Track Their Progress	133
Teaching Students How to Edit under Time Pressure	138
Providing Grammar Support	141
A Sample Mini-Lesson Sequence	142
Mini-Lessons for “Untreatable” Errors	143
Selecting and Adapting Text Models for	144
Mini-Lessons
Providing Additional Resources for Self-Study	146
Peer- and Self-Editing Workshops in the L2 Writing	147
Class
Concluding Thoughts	150

---

Questions for Discussion and Application	151
Further Reading	152
Appendix 5.1	153
Appendix 5.2	156
Chapter 5 Notes	159
Chapter 6: Beyond Error Treatment: Academic Language Development for L2 Writers	160
Reading for Writers	161
Text Selection of Reading Material	162
Analyzing Vocabulary in a Text	162
Examining Syntactic Structures in a Text	163
Readability	164
Analyzing Written Language for Style and Rhetorical Effectiveness	164
Designing Classroom Activities	165
The Role of Extensive Reading	167
Reading for Language Development: A Summary	168
Acquiring Vocabulary for Writing	170
Vocabulary Learning	170
The “Right” Vocabulary	170
Collocations	172
Paraphrasing and Citation	173
Vocabulary Analysis	174
Analyzing Texts for Lexical Variety	175
Lexical Bundles	176
Evaluating and Editing Students’ Own Texts	177
Syntactic Development	178
Syntactic Structures for Analysis, Instruction, and Application	180
Using Corpus Findings and Methods for Writing Instruction	184
Corpus-Informed Resources	184
Corpora in the Classroom	186
Concluding Thoughts	187
Questions for Discussion and Application	189
Further Reading	190
Chapter 6 Notes	190

Postscript: Summary and Putting It All Together	192
Language Development Sequence for Writing Teachers	193
Before Teaching the Course	193
During the Course	194
After Teaching the Course	195
Concluding Thoughts	197
References	198
Index	215