

Index

- Absolutism, and study of history, 23
Adams, Herbert Baxter, 89, 142
Adams, John: and the “divine” science of politics, 15–16, 66; and economic factors in political study, 148
Adorno, Theodor, and the Authoritarian Personality, 218
Agassiz, Louis, 85
Almond, Gabriel, 332; and post-behaviorialism, 285; and science theory debate, 187
Alpert, Harry, 208
Althusser, Louis, 301
American Association for the Advancement of Science, 82, 84
American Economics Association, 60–62, 85
American “exceptionalism”: and bias of political science, 153–54; in Cold War political science, 218–19; in early political science, 19
American Historical Association, 60–62, 83
American Philological Society, 83
American Political Science Association, 15; as a “counterintelligentsia,” 385; and feminism, 368–69; nonpartisanship of, 62; origins, 10, 60–62; post-behaviorialism and, 319–20; relation to social sciences, 62; and study of the state, 64. See also Professionalization; Science of politics
American Political Science Review, 363; complaints about, 392; and historiography of political science, 9
American Revolution, and the rhetoric of science, 67. See also Constitution, American; Hamilton, Alexander; Madison, James
American Social Science Association, 15; birth and decline, 84–86; reform of, 17
American Voter, The, 259; and research on sexual differences in voting, 367
Anderson, William, 189
Anthropology: early development of, 86–87; relevance to political science development, 132
Anticommunism, and postwar political science, 218. See also Cold War
Antifederalists, and the idea of the state, 68–69
Arendt, Hannah, and critique of liberalism and the science of politics, 182, 189
Aristotle, 26, 31, 57; and economic factors in political study, 148
Articles of Confederation, political theory of, 270–71
Authoritarianism, response of political scientists to, 174–76
Authority, political, defined, 245–46
Bagehot, Walter, 292
Baldwin, Simeon, 61

- Ball, Terence, 8, 204
- Barber, Benjamin, and contemporary political theory, 320–22
- Beard, Charles A., 8, 9; definition of politics, 114; and democratic state building, 108; economic interpretation of history of, 144; as pioneer in method, 147; and Progressivism, 109; and revolt against formalism, 107; and science and democracy, 177
- Behavioralism: and American culture, 250; the Chicago School and, 250; defined, 255–56; development after World War II, 202–3; distinguished from past political science, 294–97; European influences on American version of, 251; the “first” revolution of, 108; history of in political science, 249–53; and historical study, 262–63; and liberalism, 187; as a mood, 256; and political philosophy, 180–81, 262; and reform political science, 317; and research about women, 366–68; as a revolt against political theory, 180–81; and Robert Dahl, 205. See also History of political science; Postbehavioralism; Science of politics
- Behavioralist compromise, and feminism, 373–76
- Behavioral revolution, 3; contrasted to traditional political science, 296; the first, 110; the second, 10. See also Behavioralism
- Bell, Daniel, 297
- Benson, Lee, 263
- Bentham, Jeremy, 73
- Bentley, Arthur, 292; as founder of modern political science, 278; and interest group theory, 278; and reform political science, 314; and political theory in the United States, 206; and revolt against formalism, 107; and science of the state, 78
- Berelson, Bernard, 366
- Bernard, Luther Lee, 100
- Bias in political science: and middle class professors, 154–55; neglect of economic interests, 148–49; and the New Deal, 110; and political philosophy, 116; in postwar years, 218. See also Postbehavioralism
- Bluntschli, Johann K., 40
- Boas, Franz, 89
- Bodin, Jean, 68
- Bourque, Susan, 369
- Brecht, Arnold, and critique of positivism, 187–88
- Breckinridge, Sophonisba, 365
- Brinton, Daniel, 86
- Brown, Clarence (Congressman), 214
- Bryce, James: and Modern Democracies, 135; originality in political science history, 149; political science of facts and, 384
- Burgess, John W., 3, 8, 15–16, 18, 63, 89; and the American state, 75–77; and professionalization, 92; science of the state of, 64; and university reform, 97
- Burke, Edmund, 29
- Burnham, Walter Dean, and reform political science, 322–23
- Calhoun, John C., 29, 69, 71
- Calvin, John, 68
- Campbell, Angus, 367, 372
- Catlin, George E., 176
- Caucus for a New Political Science, 311, 319–20; and feminism, 368–69
- Causation, political, for Beard, 126
- Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, 201
- “Chicago School,” the: and development of behavioralism, 250. See also Lasswell, Harold; Merriam, Charles
- Chipman, Nathaniel, 69
- Cicero, 15, 25
- Citizenship: and the role of political science, 26–27; and “specialists on intelligence,” 159–60. See also Democracy

- Civic education: and American nationhood, 22–23; to Francis Lieber, 72. See also Democracy
- Classes, social, origins of in liberal democracy, 330–31
- Classical republicanism, and political science, 15
- Cold War: and behavioralism, 296; effects on political science, 204; and government funding of social science, 212–14. See also Behavioralism
- Columbia College, School of Political Science, 15, 18, 142
- Consensus, as retarding political inquiry, 154
- Conservatism: political science's incomprehension of, 393–94; and a science of the state, 77–78
- Constitution, American: relationship to modern political science, 270–71; view of human nature in, 269. See also Adams, John; Hamilton, Alexander; Madison, James; Paine, Thomas
- Converse, Phillip, 367, 372
- Corwin, Edward S., 166
- Crick, Bernard, 3–4
- Criminology, and relevance to political science, 134
- Curtis, George W., 84
- Dahl, Robert, 8, 9, 205; and reform political science, 314–15; view of the state of, 328; and women in politics, 366
- Darwinism, influence on social science, 115
- De Mably, Gabriel Bonnet, 69
- Democracy: conflict over meaning of, in political science, 328–31; elite theory of, 219; and findings of political science, 167–69; for nineteenth-century political scientists, 18; and political science, mid-century, 227; and political science between the wars, 108–9; and state-building in the United States, 108
- Demosthenes, 29
- Dennis, Jack, and political socialization, 339–40
- De Tocqueville, Alexis, 63, 70, 387; and political science for a new world, 16
- Deutsch, Karl, 327–28
- Dacey, Albert Venn, and political psychology, 143
- Dolbeare, Kenneth, 332–33
- Downs, Anthony, 355, 357
- Droop, Henry (English barrister), 349
- Duverger, Maurice, 288, 346–47, 354–55
- Duverger's Law: and development of a science of politics, 346–61; history of, 347–48
- Dunbar, Charles, 86
- Dunning, William, and a political science of the state, 64
- Dye, Thomas, 332
- Easton, David, 8, 9, 327–28; and funding of social science, 218; and political socialization, 339–40; The Political System and, 192–93, 205; and postbehavioralism, 285–88; and prebehavioral political science, 3–4; relationship to political theory, 183; and the “revolution” of 1969, 318; science and democracy and, 189; and the science of the state, 78. See also Behavioralism; Postbehavioralism; Systems theory
- Economic approaches, influence in political science, 147–59
- Economic interpretation of history, 130–31
- Economics: Austrian school of, 130; early development of, 86; relationship to political science, 59–60, 130; and the state in America, 387; superiority to political science, 387–89
- Edelman, Murray, 332, 333
- Elshtain, Jean Bethke, 369, 371
- Ely, Richard, 17, 89; and university origins, 97

- Emmeny, Brooks, 147
- Empiricism: as defect of political science, 150–53; and bias of political science, 152–53. See also Behavioralism; Bias in political science
Encyclopedia Americana, 71
- Ethnology, relevance for political science, 133
- Expertise. See Democracy; Public Administration; Science of Public Administration; State
- Fainsod, Merle, 292
- Fairlie, J. A., 62
- Farr, James, 8, 18
- Fascism, political science's response to, 175–76. See also Authoritarianism; Totalitarianism
- Federalist*, as source of modern political science, 276
- Federalists, idea of the state, 68–69. See also Hamilton, Alexander; Liberalism; Madison, James
- Feminism, 288–89; and behavioralist methods in political science, 369–70; political science treatment of, 371; in political theory, 371; in post-behavioral political science, 363–78; research agenda of, 374
- Ferejohn, John, 357
- Finer, Herman, 350
- Fiorina, Morris, 357
- Ford, Henry Jones, and defects of American Constitution, 120
- Ford Foundation, 217
- Formalism, defects of, 121–22
- Foundations. See Philanthropy
- Freeman, Jo, 370
- Freud, Sigmund, 167
- Friedrich, Carl, 177, 351
- Gamson, William, 370
- Gaudet, Hazel, 366
- Gaus, John M., 213
- Gaventa, John, 336
- Gender: emergence as category in analysis, 372–78; in political science research, 364; and the state, 364. See also Feminism; Women
- Germany, emigrés from, influence on American political science, 182, 189–90
- Giddings, Franklin, 89
- Gilman, Daniel Coit, 85
- Goodnow, Frank J., 18, 61; and defects of American Constitution, 120; Politics and Administration, 172; as a state builder, 385
- Gordon, Linda, 364
- Gosnell, Harold, and political irrationality, 168
- Government: changing forms of, 123; peculiar American qualities of, 120. See also Democracy; Public Administration; State
- Gramsci, Antonio, 341
- Greenstein, Fred I., 340
- Griffith, Ernest, 185
- Grossholtz, Jean, 369
- Grotius, 15
- Groups: political rationality of, 169–71; critique of theory of, 278–79. See also Behavioralism; Bentley, Arthur; Pluralism
- Gunnell, John G., 6, 8; and behavioralism's origins, 317; and science and theory debate, 111
- Habermas, Jürgen, 341
- Haddow, Anna, 3
- Hall, G. Stanley, 89
- Hallowell, John: attacks on liberalism, 186; The Main Currents of Modern Political Thought, 190–91; and science theory debate, 184
- Hamilton, Alexander, 15, 67, 228; and economic factors in political study, 148
- Harpham, Edward J., 4
- Hegel, G. W. F., 3

- Hermeneutics: contemporary, 342, 346; and Francis Lieber, 71
- Hermens, F., 351
- Herring, E. Pendleton, 14, 292; and interest-group research, 170–71; and political science objectivity, 216
- Hess, Robert, 327–28
- Historians, and national freedom in the United States, 23–24
- Historical comparative method, 18; in Beard, 115; merits and defects of, 149–50; for Merriam, 134
- Historical method, in political science, 131, 134
- Historiography of political science: and American exceptionalism, 9; and American politics subfield, 9; criteria for periodization used by, 10; general themes in, 7; methodological approaches in, 8; plurality within, 8; rationale for resurgence of, 4–8; theoretical traditions within, 8; types of, 207. See also Behavioralism; Democracy; History of political science; Liberalism; Postbehavioralism; Professionalization; State
- History, discipline of, relationship to political science, 59–60
- History, economic interpretation of, 14
- History of political science: advances and difficulties of, 138–39; before the mid-twentieth century, 3; early developments in, 86–87; identity debates after World War II, 204; institutional changes after World War II, 201; intellectual change after World War II, 201–2; in the late nineteenth century, 75; at mid-century, 223–28; in the nineteenth century, 232–33; periods in, 137–38, 165, 224, 291–307; postwar political contexts and, 208–21; as a profession, 74–78; professionalization in, 8; and the state, 64, 65–79, 385–87; state of the discipline, 1
- Hobbes, Thomas, 68, 71; and liberty, 31
- Hoffmann, Frank S., 78
- Holcombe, Arthur H., 147, 351
- Huberich, C. H., 62
- Human nature, and political science, 268–70
- Humboldt, Alexander von, 71
- Hume, David, 15, 69, 71
- Individualism, and Socialism, 30–31
- Inequality, conceived in radical and conventional political science, 335–36
- Institute for Social Research, influence of American political science, 183–94, 201
- Interest politics, origins in Madison's thought, 276–77
- Irish, Marian, 217
- Irrationality, in politics, 167–69
- Jacobson, Norman, 8, 205–6
- Jacoby, Russell, 320
- James, William, 86
- Janos, Andrew C., 4–5
- Jefferson, Thomas, 71
- Johns Hopkins University, 18; School of History and Political Science, 142
- Journalism, relationship to social science, 162–63
- Judson, H. P., 62
- Kelsen, Hans, 188, 191
- Kent, Frank, and political parties, 170, 250
- Key, V. O., 327–28; benign view of state, 338; and Duverger's Law, 351
- Klein, Ethel, 370
- Kuhn, Thomas, 5, 299
- Laissez-faire: defects of, 122; irrelevance to new industrial order, 124
- Lane, Robert, 367

- Lasswell, Harold, 8–9; and concept of power, 240–43; and the garrison state, 64; and philosophy of social science, 192; and political irrationality, 168–69; and reform political science, 314; and relationship to liberal democracy, 110–11
- Lazarsfeld, Paul, 366
- Lerner, Max, 147
- Liberal democracy, theory of, 329–30. See also Democracy
- Liberalism: and contemporary political theory, 321–22; political science's misunderstanding of, 392–93; in political science between the wars, 108–9; and scientific politics, 311–15; theory's critique of, 182–95; as a tradition in political science, 165–78
- Liberty: in America, 31; and national development, 26–27
- Lieber, Francis, 8, 15–17, 56, 66; concepts of the state in the United States and Europe, 70–75; defects of formalism of, 149; as founder of political science, 141
- Lindblom, Charles E., 8–9; and post-behavioralism, 288
- Lippincott, Benjamin Evans, 8; and "bias" in political science, 110; on defects of American political theory, 183; on state of political theory, 190
- Lippmann, Walter: importance to public administration, 143; and psychology, 137; and public opinion, 170–72
- Lipset, Seymour Martin, 219
- Lipsky, Michael, 370
- Locke, John: contrasted to contemporary political scientists, 115; and economic factors in political study, 148
- Loewenstein, Karl, and scientific method, 176
- Louis the Fourteenth, 23
- Lowell, A. Lawrence: and Duverger's Law, 350; and public opinion research, 167
- Lowi, Theodore J., 8–9; and critique of behavioralism, 370; his liberalism, 332; and postbehavioralism, 289
- Lynd, Robert S., influence on post-behavioralism, 285
- Machiavelli, Niccolo, 29, 68; and origins of state concept, 236
- MacIver, Robert, 235
- Macy, Jesse, 62
- Madison, James, 15, 71, 205, 223; compared to Paine, 277; and economic factors in political study, 148; as first U.S. political scientist, 277; political theory of, 277; and the science of government, 67
- Magruder, John (U.S. General), 212
- Maine, Henry Sumner, 118
- Mannheim, Karl, 387; and bureaucratic thought, 390
- March, James G., 376
- Marcuse, Herbert, 193, 341
- Markby, Sir William, 117
- Marx, Karl, 63; and economic factors in political study, 148; on the modern state, 70
- Marxism: and critique of liberal democratic theory, 329–30; political scientists respond to, 175; and postbehavioralism in political science, 299–301
- Merriam, Charles, 3–4, 8–9; and behavioralism, 109–10, 250; on political irrationality, 167–68; and research on women, 365; on science and democracy, 178; and a science of reform politics, 313–14; and scientism, 100; view of political theory, 181
- Methods: development of social surveys, 135; in early social science, 98–103; importance of quantitative, 139
- Michels, Robert, 169–70
- Middletown*, and systematic study, 163
- Mill, John Stuart, 136–37, 349
- Miller, Donald, 367, 372

- Mills, C. Wright, critique of postwar social science, 216
- Mitchell, Wesley C., 100
- Modern Language Association, 83
- Montesquieu, Charles Secondat de, 15, 41, 69, 71
- Moralism, contrasted to social science, 163–64
- Moses, Bernard, 62
- Munro, William G., 176, 351
- Murray, Robert H., 3
- Napoleon Bonaparte, 38
- National Conference for Charities and Corrections, 85
- National Conferences on the Science of Politics, 166, 173
- National Opinion Research Center, 201
- National Science Foundation, 211, 215
- National university, and citizenship, 22
- Nelson, Barbara, 378
- Newcomb, Simon, 86
- New Deal: effects on later political science, 208; postbehavioral misconceptions about, 392–93
- New institutionalism, and feminism in political science, 376–78
- New York Bureau of Municipal Research, 136, 143
- Niebuhr, Barthold G., 71
- Nourse, E. G., 213
- Oberschall, Anthony, 370
- Objectivity: in early social science, 102–3; in postbehavioral political science, 337–38; and social sciences during the Cold War, 214
- Odegard, Peter H., 147
- Ogburn, William F., 100, 213–14
- Okin, Susan Moller, 371
- Olsen, Johan, 376
- Oppenheim, Felix, 191
- Paine, Thomas, 205; contrasted to modern political scientists, 280; view of society and government, 272–80
- Park, Robert, 100, 102
- Parties, political: and Duverger's Law, 350–58; political science embrace and criticism of, 170; in U.S. democracy, 120–21
- Peirce, Benjamin, 85
- Peoples' Choice, The*, 258; and research about women, 366
- Philanthropy: and the behavioral movement, 253–54; influence on social sciences, 216–19; role in postwar political science, 215
- Philosophy of science: and post-behavioral political science, 305–6
- Pittsburgh Survey, 136
- Plato, 71; and economic factors in political studies, 148
- Pluralism: as agenda for political research, 202, 205, 292–93, 295
- Pocock, J. G. A., 5
- Political, the: defined, 231
- Political behavior: defined, 205; study of, 210; as a subfield, 254. See also Behavioralism
- Political economy: as a new science, 24–26; and postbehavioralism, 302; similarity of methods to political science, 145
- Political education, and political science, 205–6, 268, 281–82
- Political ethics, in the modern versus classical polity, 28
- Political science, discipline of: conventionalism of, 333; defined, 244–47; distinguished from other fields, 245–46; identity of, 226; modern variety compared to Founders, 277; new complexity of, 125; relation to economics, 59–60, 130; relation to history, 59–60; relation to other social sciences, 230–33; role in democratic politics, 126–27; state of, 145–46; weakness of intellectual foundations of, 227. See also Professionalization; Science of politics

- Political Science in America: Oral Histories of a Discipline*, 4
- Political Science Quarterly*, 18
- Political socialization: sex differences in, 367; weakness of conventional political science in study of, 339–41
- Political system, and behavioralism, 260–61. See also Easton, David
- Political theory: as an academic field of political science, 180–81; in the college curriculum, 27–28; as commentary on state of political science, 179–95; and feminism, 371; as a great tradition, 182; hostility of conventional political science to, 150–52; inadequacies of, 294; irrelevance of to public discourse, 321–22; origins in the United States, 179–95; and political science, 116; and post-behavioralism, 302–3; and reform political science, 320–23; relevance to political science, 133; as a subfield, 179–95
- Political thought, history of, 129
- Politics and administration. See Public Administration
- Politics and Community: Dissenting Essays in Political Science*, 286
- Politics and Society*, 286
- Pollock, Frederick, 3
- Positivism, postbehavioral critique of, 304–5
- Postbehavioralism: and American politics, 298; contrasted to behavioralism, 298–304; and conventional political science, 332–33; definitions of, 11, 285; origins of, 298–304; and positivism, 304–5
- Poulantzas, Nicos, 301
- Power: as concept in political science research, 239–43; defects as analytical tool, 243; and Harold Lasswell, 241–43
- Powell, G. Bingham, 332
- Powell, John Wesley, 84
- Presidency: political science and the, 393
- Prewitt, Kenneth, 328
- Private property: and democratic politics, 115–16
- Process, as a method of study, 135. See also Bentley, Arthur
- Professionalism: and democracy, 173; and end of reform political science, 314–19; middle-class bias of political science, 156–57; role in science theory debate, 195
- Professionalization: competing ideas about, 94–98; of early social sciences, 88–98; and feminism, 374; German model of, 96; and growth of American state, 74–78; and industrialization, 93–94; and moral uncertainty, 93–94; and political science influence, 226; and reform political science, 316–17; and scholarly research, 96–97; in sociology, 94; sociology of, 94; and state theories, 74–78; and teaching, 95–96
- Progressivism: impact on political science, 10, 165–66, 312–13; and science of the state, 78
- Proportional representation, 350–51
- Psychology: development of, 86–87; and early behaviorism, 99; influence on political science, 133, 167; scientism of, 108
- Psychopathology and Politics*, 108
- Public administration: and democracy, 44, 121; and nineteenth-century political science, 17. See also Science of public administration
- Public opinion, as a subfield of political science, 389–92
- Public policy, 208; revival in post-behavioralism, 389–92; as a subfield, 389–90; tool of political research, 244–45
- Publics. See Democracy
- Pufendorf, Samuel, 71

- Putnam, Frederic Ward, 86
Putnam, Herbert, 62
- Radical political science: characteristics, 336–37; lessons from, 341–42. See also Marxism; Postbehavioralism
- Rae, Douglas, 353–55
- Ramsay, David, 67
- Rational choice: and the American bureaucratic state, 390–91; and Duverger's Law, 352–53; and postbehavioralism, 302–3; and rise of Republican Party, 390
- Rationalism, criticized in political science, 280
- Reform, political: and beginnings of social science, 89–91; in early American psychology, 92; in New Deal political science, 109; and political science, 225, 323
- Reinsch, Paul S., 61
- Relativism: and German emigré scholars, 194; and origins of political theory, 186–87
- Revolt against formalism, 107–8. See also Formalism
- Ricci, David, 8; and liberalism in political science, 111; as skeptical historian, 4–5
- Riker, William H., 8, 9; and post-behavioralism, 288
- Ritter, Gretchen, 378
- Robinson, James H., 144
- Robinson, Joan, 391
- Rockefeller Foundation, 254
- Rodgers, Daniel, 76
- Ross, Dorothy, 4, 8, 18; and American exceptionalism, 6
- Ross, E. A., 89
- Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 118
- Rowe, L. S., 62
- Sabine, George, 182
- St. Simon, Claude Henri de, 29
- Sanborn, Frank B., 84
- Sapiro, Virginia, 370, 378
- Savigny, Friedrich Karl von, 71
- Schattschneider, E. E., 351
- Schleiermacher, Friedrich E. G., 71
- Schaper, W. A., 62
- Schwarz, John, 391
- Science: and behavioralism, 259; defining methods of, 345; as language of political reform, 312–13; as public discourse, 387–88; and reform political science, 313–14
- Science of politics: and American republicanism, 66–70; definitions of, 32, 60, 117; development of, 345–46; difficulties of, 139–41; and regime changes, 394; as a science of the state, 64–79, 387; in the United States, 141–46. See also Behavioralism; Political science, discipline of; Professionalization; Science of public administration
- Science of public administration: and American democracy, 39–40, 42; and comparative historical method, 45–47; and constitutional law, 41; and democratic state, 44–45; distinguished from politics, 40–41; eclipse of as subfield in political science, 393; in England, 38; in France, 38; history of, 34–44; and modern state, 34–44; necessity for in modern conditions, 35–36; periodization of history of, 37; and political science, 34–44; in Prussia, 38–39; and public opinion, 42–43; in the United States, 38–39. See also Public administration; State
- Scientism: and the comparative-historical method, 98; and decline of values, 102; critiques of, 299–300; and Darwinians, 98–99; and decline of religion in the United States, 101; in early psychology, 99; in early social science, 98–104; and liberalism, 176; limitations imposed by, 337; and natural sciences, 98; and political

- Scientism (continued)
 quietism, 101; and postbehavioralism, 304; in postwar political science, 210–14; as self-fulfilling prophecy, 279; and World War I, 103
- Scott, Joan, 371
- Scottish Enlightenment, 66
- Schuman, Frederick, 147
- Second Republic of the United States, 386–87
- Seeley, John R., 3, 59
- Seidelman, Raymond, 8, 385; as skeptical historian, 4–5; and post-behavioralist critique, 287
- Seneca, 32
- Sex. See Gender
- Shaw, Albert, 62
- Shively, W. P., 356
- Silverberg, Helene, 8, 288
- Simon, Herbert: concept of political science, 191–92; and public policy sub-field, 389
- Skinner, B. F., 294
- Skinner, Quentin, 5
- Skocpol, Theda, 378
- Skowronek, Stephen, 385
- Small, Albion, 89; and authority of social science over religion, 93; and moral connotations of science, 102; and revolt against formalism, 144
- Smith, J. Allen, 147
- Social psychology, 133
- Somit, Albert, 2, 384
- Social Science Research Council, 81–82, 252
- Social sciences: American origins in Protestantism, 84–88; definitions of, 87; development as a science, 346; distinguished from natural sciences, 101; as empirical investigation, 90–91; and historical consciousness, 90; history, Civil War to 1820, 81–104; postwar support by government, 211–12; as solution to social and political problems, 91
- Society, concept of, 269–70
- Sociology: development of, 86, 144; influence on development of behavioralism, 251; relation to political science, 132–33
- Specialists: “on intelligence,” 160–61; role in a democracy, 159
- Specialization, causes of, 232–33
- Staatswissenschaft*, 65–66
- State: in America, 36–38, 56–58, 64–79; and American democracy, 44–45; and behavioralism, 108; as a common benefit organization, 328–29; competing ideas of origin of, 118–19; as concept for scientific research, 237–38; definitions of, 49, 117; and democracy, 53–58; development of, 114–15, 384; disappearance in social science, 218–19; distinguished from government, 54–56; distinguished from politics, 235–39; economics as language of, 390–91; effects on political science, 383–94; functions of, 123–24; historical ideas about the, 50–53; and history of political science, 384–86; influence from Europe on American version, 65–79; as a “limiting concept,” 234; as a middle-class product in America, 154; its modern form, 35–36; as myth, 237; in nineteenth-century political science, 16–17, 70, 75–78; as opposed to the political system, 233–36; origins of, 27–28, 118–19, 235; political science conceptions of, 56–58, 108; in postbehavioral political science, 300; and public administration, 35; and radical thought, 329–31; in reform political science, 316; and social classes, 119; sovereignty of, 51–54; in Western Europe, 55–56
- Stocking, George, 82
- Stokes, Donald, 367, 372
- Story, Joseph, 71, 73
- Stouffer, Samuel, 218; and The American Soldier, 209
- Strauss, Leo: and the crisis of liberal

- democracy, 203; and critique of liberalism and political science, 182, 189, 193
- Structural-functionalism: in post-behavioral political science, 334–35
- Sumner, William Graham, 86
- Survey Research Center (University of Michigan), 201
- Surveys: development of in the United States, 136; importance of, 135; role in political science, 253
- Systems theory, 230; defined, 229; development of, 205
- Tanenhous, Joseph, 2
- Thucydides, 26
- Tingsten, Herbert, 250
- Totalitarianism, and origins of political theory, 193
- Truman, David B., 292; definitions of political behavior in, 256–58; democratic elitism of, 329; and reform political science, 314
- Tulane University, 61
- United States Census Bureau, 142
- United States Government, as funder of social sciences, 211–16
- Universities, and rise of the middle class, 97
- Utopias, and communism, 29
- Values, and behavioralism. See also Behavioralism; Political Theory; Scientism
- Veblen, Thorstein, and scientism, 99–100
- Verba, Sidney, 328
- Vietnam War, political scientists' disputes about, 220. See also Cold War
- Vining, Joseph, 389
- Voegelin, Eric, and the critique of liberalism, 185–86
- Walker, Francis A., 86
- Wallas, Graham: and development of political psychology, 136–37; and political irrationality, 167
- Ward, Lester Frank, 84; and a science of reform politics, 314
- Watson, John B., 99, 294
- Weber, Max, in postbehavioralism, 299
- Webster, Daniel, 29
- White, Andrew Dickson, 62, 86
- White, Leonard D., 8; on the postwar discipline, 204–5
- Whyte, William Foote, 183
- Willoughby, W. W., 3, 8–9, 16, 61, 64; and failure of liberal democracy, 174
- Wilson, Francis G., and origins of political theory as a subfield, 184–85
- Wilson, Woodrow, 3, 8–9, 16–17, 292; and APSA origins, 61; and Congressional Government, 120; historical-comparative method of, 18, 149; and reform political science, 314; and revolt against formalism, 107; and role of administrators in a democracy, 172; and the state, 64, 75, 384–85
- Wolfe, Alan, 319
- Wolin, Sheldon, 190
- Women: in postbehavioral political science, 368–72; research about in political science, 365. See also Feminism; Gender
- Women's Caucus for Political Science, 368–69
- Women's Studies, 363
- Woolsey, Theodore Dwight, 16, 56, 64, 75–76; and defects of formalism, 149
- World War II, effects on political science, 10, 208, 210, 251
- Wright, Benjamin, 185
- Wright, Carroll D., 84, 94
- Zeigler, L. Harmon, 332